

To Whom it May Concern:

June 24, 2009

I, Todd Miller, Director of Talent Development and Casting for Discovery Channel, have personally known Reed Clare for five years. During that time, I have known Reed to be immersed in the acting profession working hard and persevering to develop himself as a fine collaborative artist and emerging talent. As a person, he has demonstrated himself to be a man of intelligence, integrity, humor, accountability, a solid work ethic, and determination which speaks to the character that he possesses as an individual. I have witnessed his growth as an artist, elevating himself and his acting career to the next level.

I know that Reed was a solid performer in the Metropolitan Opera's production of MacBeth and has also executive produced, wrote and acted in the film, 'Kingdomcome', which is a professional quality short action film that he created and stared in. I would not hesitate to recommend Reed for appropriate projects that I am associated with. I wish him all the best in his expanding acting/filmmaking career and all his professional endeavors.
