

To Whom It May Concern,
7/01/09

My name is John P. Rigores and I am the Operations Manager and Artistic Director at Madame Tussauds Wax Museum in Los Angeles and previously I held the same positions in New York for eight years. I have a Bachelor of Science degree in Media Studies from Queens college in New York, where I learned the art of filmmaking, lighting, sound, shooting, editing, and producing. I own a production company called New Media Comedy, which is affiliated with the New York Underground Comedy Festival and has had clients such as Sity, The Gospel Channel, Italian-American Network, and Eagle Rock Entertainment. I am also a filmmaker and have been involved with several independent films, one of which is the short film "Kingdom Come", which I co-created and collaborated on with a talented artist/actor/filmmaker, Reed Clare.

I met Reed when he was working as an actor on a comedy short called "Puppy Love". When we finished filming Reed and I remained in contact and became friends. Several years later we began to work together on the short film "Kingdom Come". Reed and I are both the Executive Producers for the film and are very proud of the final outcome. I thoroughly enjoyed working with Reed on this project and have a great respect for his work ethic and commitment to his craft. He is a talented performer and consummate professional. I look forward to working with him again in the future.

Sincerely,

John P. Rigores
